The new Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Bonaparte, weighs 300 pounds. He recently received the Laetare medal from Notre Dame University of Indiana as the most distinguished Catholic layman who during the war had rendered the most efficient and laudable service to the Catholic church. The President seems to have had two ends in view to get a man heavy enough to hold down the lid and please a vast number of the fellow citizens.

The United States has paid out in pensions nearly three billions of dollars since the revolutionary war, and it's still paying at the rate of $150,000,000 a year. There met in Louisville last week the remnant of a body of men who draw no pensions, but they looked in every respect as good as those who do.

TWELVE Napoleons of finance are making brooms in the Ohio penitentiary and wishing they had obeyed the command, "Thou shalt not steal." The way of the transgressor is hard, but it can not be made too hard for the bank officials who betray their trusts.

Eighty tons of gold and $10,000,000 in silver were hauled from the old subtreasury at Chicago to the new Federal building Saturday. It was the striking teamsters' chance to catch even, but they dared not embrace it.

WOMEN are not admitted to dog hospitals in New York. No reason is given but we suppose it is because the dear creatures can't hold their tongues and their prattle disturbs the pups.

A CLOCK has been invented which will run 30,000 years, with the aid of radium. What's the use? If we had one we would forget and wind it up every day.

President Roosevelt, in a letter addressed to Secretary Taft, made public, directs the dismissal of Minister Bowen from the diplomatic service and arraigns Mr. Bowen's conduct in the Bowen-Loomis controversy as "reprehensible." Mr. Loomis is exonerated as the result of Secretary Taft's findings. The president declares that Bowen's explanation of his conduct is inexcusable and shows his entire unfitness for the service.
